

GET GROUCHY,
AND WOMEN, TOO,
WHEN NEGLECTED
Petting Essential as Salve
For Humans in Grip
Of Dull Routine.

By DOROTHY DIX.

Isn't it wonderful, Mabel, how some of us, alone, find out that the great soul sickness of the world is due to psychic malnutrition, and that the one and only remedy for it is words of praise and affection for those about us. Furthermore, the learned doctor has ascertained, from repeated observations, that unless a certain percentage of these spiritual vitamins form part of our daily diet we grow morbid and grouchy, and are apt to seek "the excitement of the outer world."

All of which, being translated, means that what ails most of us who are unhappy, and restless, and dissatisfied, and who go about with a dark brown taste in our mouths, and an on-oh-darn-it-what's-the-use-of-feeling, is lack of appreciation. Also that if we haven't got somebody at home to jolly us, we are mighty prone to jump the gun, and hunt up some artificial salve, spreader, who isn't so niggardly about handing out a few kind words as are the members of our family circle.

Oh, we have nearly all got psychic malnutrition. There's no news to us in that. It has been a chronic complaint from which we have suffered for years and years. What surprises us is to find out that the disease is epidemic, and that our husbands and wives, and children, and parents, and friends and neighbors, and employees are all afflicted with it, too. What ails most of us, and what is interesting because it was rare and unusual.

Curious that we do not detect in others the same symptoms that we have ourselves, isn't it? More than passing strange that two people should live side by side, and each be perishing of heart hunger, and neither one suspect it of the other, isn't it? But it is true.

Take the ordinary business man. No slave chained to his oars in the galleys ever toiled more incessantly than he. Day after day, year after year, he works to the limit of his strength, and often beyond it, to support wife and children. Out of all his labor he gets board and clothes, for stove as he goes, he can't get more for more money, more indulgences.

Father is the least considered person in the home he supports. He is the one who toils through hot summer and cold winters while the family takes its outings. He wears the shabby clothes. He has the poorest room, and he is lucky if he has one hook in a closet, or one drawer in a chiffonier to call his own. Father grows grouchy, and mother says she can't imagine what is the matter with him, and she thinks that if he had acted that way in his courtship days she would never on earth have said, "Yes."

Father is suffering from psychic malnutrition, and a lightning cure for him is to be given by mother and the children telling him how wonderful and great he is, and how they love him, and admire him, and thank him for standing by them, and how they are proud of him. No man minds being sacrificed to his family if they make a fuss over him and call attention to his noble heroism. What gets his goat is never being noticed by his family, and he notices that he is a martyr, and that light cigarettes from the flames that are curling about him, and go on talking about new him into buying.

Same thing about the ordinary woman. The domestic career means a life sentence at hard labor for her. Bringing up children. Walking the cat. Cooking. Sewing. Mending. Patching. Stretching $1 over the space of $5. She develops nerves. Gets so nagging, peevish, fretful, whining, and complaining. Husband suggests that she had better see the doctor, and he never dreams that he and the children have the only medicine on earth that is a specific for her complaint. She is suffering from psychic malnutrition and all she needs is large, allopathic doses of flattery. She needs to be told that she grows more beautiful each year, that she is the greatest manager on earth, and the most wonderful mother, and that she can cook better than any $10.00 chef.

The reason that housework and the domestic life gets to be so monotonous to women is because it is work that is taken for granted. It is so seldom gets the glad hand. A woman who writes, or sings, or paints, or sells goods, has her work praised, if she does good work, but the woman who keeps a house, makes supper, and sits her family to supper, does no more than is expected of her. People gulp down in five minutes a dish that has taken two hours to prepare, and nobody says "turkey" about it. No wonder that cooks are subject, above all other individuals, to psychic malnutrition. The marvel is that they get such a lack of appreciation at all.

Children grow irritable and unruly. They are not willing to stay at home, and resent every thing that is said to them. Unmistakable diagnosis. Psychic malnutrition. Nobody thinks of children having it. We consider it an adult disease, but children suffer from it even more than grown-ups. In many families it would be considered little short of a crime to do anything but talk to a child of his faults and hold him shortcoming up before him. That is the reason that young people from their parents. They are starved out for a little appreciation, and they want to go to strangers who will give it to them. Old people are also victims of their crankiness, and kill-joy spirit could be cured by a little appreciation, a little recognition of all they have done in life.

The Superintendent of New York Public Schools has asked all principals and teachers carefully to study the history test books to find whether they contain anything detrimental to American ideals and heroes.

Harding Sees A. J. Balfour

Members of British Delegation Received at White House.

By EVELYN C. HUNT.

President Harding received the British delegates to the armament conference at the White House yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The group was headed by Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour, presented by the British Ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes, who is also a member of the British delegation. Mr. Balfour reached Washington yesterday morning.

Mrs. Harding received a number of ladies by appointment yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Hughes, wife of the Secretary of State, occupied a box at the Alda concert at the National Theater yesterday afternoon.

The Secretary of War, J. W. Weeks, will entertain a notable company at luncheon at the Metropolitan Club Wednesday, November 15, in honor of Marshal Poch and Gen. Diaz. The guests will number sixty and many of the distinguished guests who attended the American Legion convention in Kansas City have been invited. Admiral Earl Beatty has another engagement for that evening, so is doubtful if he can attend the dinner, and Lieut. Gen. Jacques expects to leave Washington before that date.

Yesterday the Secretary of War attended the first of the series of semi-monthly luncheons given by the chief of the finance division of the War Department at the Army and Navy Club. Others present included Brig. Gen. H. M. Lord, chief of the finance division of the War Department, and the officers of the Reserve Corps, the commissioned officers and civilian staff of the division.

Secretary and Mrs. Denby WILL GIVE DINNER SERIES.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Edw. Denby will give a series of dinners in compliment to the naval advisers of the various delegations to the armament conference. They will entertain Monday evening in honor of Admiral de Bon, naval adviser to the French conference delegation, and will give a dinner Wednesday for Lord Lee of Fareham, first lord of the British admiralty, and Lady Lee. They will entertain also at dinner Monday, November 21, in compliment to Admiral de Bon, the Chinese delegation, and one on Tuesday, November 22, in honor of Vice Admiral Acton, of the Italian delegation.

Secretary and Mrs. Denby entertained at dinner last Tuesday evening in compliment to Admiral of the Fleet Earl Beatty, and Countess Beatty. The Secretary of the Navy, Edwin Denby, will be the guest of honor at the dinner to be given by Admiral Kato, delegate from Japan to the armament conference, Tuesday evening at the Shoreham Hotel. Sunday evening the reception at which the Japanese Ambassador, Baron Shidehara, will introduce the newspaper correspondents to the Japanese delegation. The affair will be held at the Shoreham Hotel.

The Ambassador of Spain and Señora de Riano entertained at dinner last evening at the embassy. The wife of the Belgian Ambassador, Baroness de Cartier, has as her guest her niece, Miss Betty Connolly of Palisades-on-the-Hudson.
